POSTPONEMENT IN WILLIAMS CASE

Probable that the Trial at Marianna Will be Called About Two Weeks Later Than at First Decided Upon When Change of Venue Was Granted.

THIS IS NECESSARY, OWING TO THE PREVALENCE OF YELLOW FEVER—NOV. 29TH WILL PROBABLY BE THE DATE ON WHICH THE TRIAL WILL BEGIN.

The trial of William F. Williams, charged with the murder of Edwin C. Danahy, which occurred in this city some months since, will probably occur in Marianna on Nov. 29th, instead of Nov. 16th, as at first decided upon.

At least this is practically understood between the attorneys for the defense and prosecution, and it is hardly probable that the court will object to such postponement. Williams, who is now in the county jail, was granted a change of venue in the Danahy case at the recent term of the circuit court, when he was convicted of having killed John White and sentenced to life imprisonment. The prevalence of yellow fever in Pensacola, however, and the fact that all of the witnesses reside here, has made it impossible to try the case on November 16th, due to the fact that it is hardly possible that quarantine restrictions against Pensacola will be removed by that date.

The term of the Jackson county court convenes on November 18th, and it will then be definitely settled whether or not the case is to be called on Wednesday, the 29th, but from what can be learned from the attorneys engaged in the case, it is very probable that this date will be selected.

A HOT WATER BOTTLE STORY.

A man bought a hot water bottle at a "nine cent" store for 50c. We wanted to charge him a dollar for a good one, and he said, "I have saved 50c." But the first time he used the bottle it leaked and the second time it came apart, and then he said, "I had my money back," but he could not get it.

MORAL:

A dollar well spent is better than fifty cents badly saved. Our hot water bottles are made by a reliable firm, and are worth the price we ask because they last and won't leak. Every bottle guaranteed perfect. Prices $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50, depending on size. Don't be like the man in the story.

COTTAGE HILL

Special to The Journal.
Cottage Hill, Nov. 6.—Mr. Vaughn Smith expects to move to Cardington, Ohio, in a few days.

Mrs. Robert Harrouse who has been sick for two months is able to sit up now but gains strength very slowly.

The usual number of tourists are expected here this winter.

Rev. Clark who has been a resident of our village for several months has moved to the William Vaughn place.

On last Friday night the Literary Club gave a public entertainment the proceeds of which are to be used to purchase a Christmas treat. The entertainment was of a high order and the club has been asked to repeat it in the near future. It will probably be repeated this week.

Mrs. Walters expects her daughter from Iowa to spend several weeks here on a visit in the near future.

Sportsmen are bagging the usual amount of game but no unusual records have been made so far.

The recent tour of President Roosevelt through the south, where he has been receiving with commendation and praise is in striking contrast to what the New Orleans Times-Democrat said two years ago after the president had asked Booker T. Washington to the White House. It then said that he had "made himself socially impossible in the south." Evidently he is a greater president than the Times-Democrat thought him to be.

SAND PAINTINGS.

Pictures That Are Used in Navajo Indian Ceremonies.

To paint a picture in ordinary oils or water colors, with a model to copy, is a difficult task enough to suit most people, but to paint a picture by dropping pinches of colored earth or sand on a smooth ground surface and to paint it from memory exactly as some other artist painted it a year or more ago appears even more difficult. Such, however, is the process by which some tribes of American Indians reproduce from time to time pictures that are used in certain aboriginal ceremonies, and that are believed to be exactly similar to original drawings that date back an unknown number of generations.

In the Peabody museum at Harvard university there is a colored model of one of these paintings that a member of the museum staff had the good fortune to see in process of actual construction, the picture being used in a ceremony performed to cure the illness of two members of a small Navajo village. It represents the four rain gods—one for each of the cardinal points of the compass—who are shown coming from a southern cloud, blue in color, which rises in turn from a black, white and yellow line symbolizing the north, east and west. The god of the north wind is black, the god of the south wind is white, the god of the east wind is yellow and the god of the west wind is blue, and each carries a highly decorated tobacco pouch, containing also a ray of the sun, with which he is supposed to light his pipe. The combination of the sun with the rain, which the Indian imagination pictured the gods as sending, is symbolized by rainbow colors, red and blue, decorating the tobacco bags. From the left hand of each figure hangs a water bottle, a natural emblem of his office, while around the north, west and south sides of the picture is the rainbow, personified by a goddess.

The sand picture, which exists from year to year only in the memory of the medicine man, or shaman, who directs the making of it, is "drawn" on the floor of a sacred hut especially constructed with its doorway carefully facing the east, from which direction the Indians believe no evil spirit need be expected. The medicine man has as his advisers and memory assistants several of the men of the tribe who have participated in many a former ceremony of the kind. The actual "painters" are four young men of the tribe, who first lay out a smooth foundation of brown sand and then, starting in the middle, move outward in either direction as the center of the design is finished. Each painter takes a pinch of sand of the necessary color and drops it in the proper place by rubbing it slowly between thumb and forefinger. In this way, line by line, the picture comes slowly into being until at the end of several hours a finished "painting" about 5 by 15 feet in size has been executed to the satisfaction of the chief medicine man and his experienced advisers.

Sydney Smith and Animals.

Sydney Smith's love of animals led him into ludicrous mistakes at times, as when, having given his pigs fermented grains, he found them all drunk and "grunting 'God Save the King' about the sty," and when he allowed one of his quadrupeds to swallow a mighty dose of pills, loaves and all. But his "back scratcher" was a good idea. He had a theory that every animal delights to scratch its backbone, so he put up his "universal scratcher," a sharp edged pole, resting on a high and a low post, adapted to every height, from a horse to a lamb. Before, all his gates used to be broken; after the erection of the scratcher he never sustained any damage, and the only question was which was the more pleased with the invention, he or the animals, as they titillated their hides.

CLEANED HOUSE

Out with the Old Food and in with the New.

They have sensible women in El Reno, Oklahoma. One says:

"For 20 years I was accustomed to eat freely of pork, but biscuits shortened with lard, and a rich diet of every kind, washed down with plentiful strong coffee.

"In time my appetite became sickle and my digestion was almost completely deranged.

"My complexion grew to be absolutely repulsive—thick, muddy and blotched—and I was so nervous and cross that I cannot now understand how my friends endured my crankiness; my memory failed, nothing went right with me and life became almost unendurable burdensome. Medicine did me absolutely no good whatever. I endured this condition for 7 years.

"In January (1904) a friend told me that for several years prior to 1900 she had suffered much as I appeared to be suffering, and that the cause of it was improper food. That when she reached this conclusion she began the systematic use of Grape-Nuts food, with a general course of diet and exercise, such as is recommended in the little book, 'The Road to Wellville,' and was thereby completely restored to health in a very short time.

"Knowing that the word of my friend could be implicitly relied upon, I determined to follow her example. I stopped the use of all medicines at once, made Grape-Nuts food the principal article of my diet, and practiced the course of living enjoined in the 'Road to Wellville'—and all in my great joy and bodily comfort as witnesses.

"My mind became clear and active, and my memory fully restored.

"My digestion has been completely restored, and I am no longer haunted nightly by hideous dreams.

"My appetite has ceased to be sickle and capricious, one moment 'all gone' and the next voracious and insatiable, but now it is healthy and normal, once more.

"My nerves are steady and strong. 'I really believe I am as amiable as any woman ought to be on this earth. I'm glad I'm living.

"My complexion has cleared up and is like it used to be when I was a girl." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

ANTS' NOSES.
There are five of them, and each has its own duty.

In their antennae, or feelers, ants have five noses, each of which has its own duty to perform.

One nose tells the ant whether it is in its own nest or that of an enemy; another nose discriminates between odors of ants of the same species, but of different colonies; a third nasal organ serves the purpose of discerning the scent laid down by the ant's own feet, so that it may be able to retrace the way quite easily; a fourth nose smells the larvae and pupae, and the fifth nose detects the presence of an enemy.

If an ant is deprived of a certain nose, it will live peacefully with enemies, but if it retains its fifth nose it will fight the alien to the death. There is a difference in the functions of nose one and nose five, although they appear to be somewhat alike.

This sense of smell does not come till the ants are three days old. If, therefore, ants only twelve hours old are placed among others belonging to different colonies they will grow up quite amicably and not understand that they are a mixed lot, because they will have grown up with ideas of scent in accordance with their surroundings. The sense of smell to them is as important as the sense of sight to human beings.
